

Lunch Box Talk: Fruit, vegetables and livestock in London's Square Mile?

Talks and Debates

24 June

13:00 - 13:50

Show booking information

The Architecture Centre Network presents an exciting series of three Lunch Box Talks. The discussions will explore the significant, and sometimes controversial, relationship between food and the built environment across the UK.

'Fruit, vegetables and livestock in London's Square Mile?'

Mitchell Taylor Workshop's proposal for a temporary use of the 'cheese grater' development site (in the City's Leadenhall Street), offered an innovative and cost-effective solution for keeping a large, empty site vibrant. This exciting proposal could be adopted as a model for other disused sites across the UK. This session involves a presentation by Piers Taylor of Mitchell Taylor Workshop, in conversation with Gill Fearnough, director of The Architecture Centre, Bristol.

Pre-booked tickets (£6) include a lunch box from the Farm Collective, who are committed to providing the best UK farm sourced food. Tickets can also be purchased at the door, for £2 (no lunch box provided).

Please arrive at 1pm prompt.

Location

The Alan Baxter Gallery 70 Cowcross Street
London
EC1M 6EJ

Show in Google

